These baroque timpani are consistent result of countless studies of contemporary instruments of the 18th and 19th century concerning their dimensions and shape.

The alloyed copper bowls are meticulously hand-forged and get their antique appearance by a special treatment. Also hand-forged are the fittings in the shape of a rosette. The rosette is synonym for perfection since the Gothic. The counterhoops are made from a special angle-steel profile which provides maximum sturdiness. This guarantees an equal head tension at any part of the rim. The tension screws feature shapely and ergonomical tabs. By...

The counterhoops are made from a special angle-steel profile which provides maximum sturdiness. This guarantees an equal head tension at any part of the rim. The tension screws feature shapely and ergonomic tabs. By a specially cut fine thread they can be turned very easily even at higher head tension.

Also the cross stands are hand-turned after old recordings. They integrate harmonically into the historic appearance of the instruments.

Fitting to these baroque timpani the mallets „Bach“ (ZS-SPA-6041-026), manufactured after examples from the British National Museum and „Mozart“ (ZS-SPA-6038-029) are recommended.
